

MASKS AND LEAD PIPE.

WAS THERE A PLOT TO ROB AND KILL DRUGGIST HECHT?

He suspects his friend, Clerk of the Police, who is now looking for two other fellow fellows who are supposed to have been in conspiracy with him. It was a very neat scheme that was put up on Druggist George Hecht, whose drug store stands at the corner of Livingston and Clinton streets. Hecht planned it and Mr. Hecht, who was a 17-year-old clerk, George Meister—probably got the idea from a dime novel, for it included the usual penny dreadful accessories. There were black masks and lead pipes and mysterious signals and all the rest of it. But unfortunately for the success of the plot, the police were suspicious early in the game, and young Meister is now locked up, while detectives are searching for his alleged accomplices.

Young Meister has been employed in the drug store for five weeks, and for a fortnight Hecht has suspected that the boy was robbing him. As he had been getting a small amount of money in a desk in his apartment, he had been planning to rob the store, but he had been so careful that he had not been detected. He had been so careful that he had not been detected. He had been so careful that he had not been detected.

"What are you doing here?" he demanded. "We have come to look at your gas meter," replied one of the strangers. "We're inspectors."

"Yes! I let 'em in from the door," added Meister. "They said they wanted to inspect the meter."

"Come up out of there, you two," ordered the druggist, "and you, George, go for a policeman."

Taking the two youths into his room, he guarded them until Meister's return, which was announced by another signal whistle. Meister said he had been to the store, but a customer who came into the store just then succeeded better, at the druggist's request. After some consideration Hecht concluded that he didn't want the youths arrested because it would involve too much trouble.

Any way, there was no direct evidence against him. So the strangers were away hastily after having told the druggist their names. They were Charles Frankel and Frank Burke and giving addresses that were fictitious. Very shortly after Hecht was sorry that he had let the two youths in, for he had been told that they were in the back room and found Meister rummaging about his desk.

"What are you doing there?" demanded Hecht. "Oh, nothing," said the clerk, moving over toward the piano. "I was just looking for something."

As he spoke he edged up nearer and nearer to the piano. He had been told that the piano was the place where the money was hidden. He had been told that the piano was the place where the money was hidden. He had been told that the piano was the place where the money was hidden.

"Get out of here," he said. "You're discharged. Go out in the store and I'll pay you. You can get a job elsewhere if you're rested."

Seeing nothing else for it, the youth did as he was told. Then he returned to the room and found that the piano was empty. He had been told that the piano was the place where the money was hidden. ## NEW CLANS AT WEST POINT.

List of the Successful Candidates Who Were Examined at Army Posts. WASHINGTON, March 21.—The War Department today announced the list of successful candidates for West Point, which were examined at army posts early this month. Over 200 principals and alternates reported to fill 111 vacancies, and of this number seventy-nine were successful, and will be admitted next June in time to begin the annual summer encampment. Under an order from the department all candidates for the Military Academy are now examined at the army posts nearest their homes. The papers forwarded to West Point for revision and report, and the findings then sent to Washington. This rule has been found to work well, and saves young men traveling expenses to and from West Point who may fail to come up to the severe mental and physical requirements. In the list of those successful are three young men appointed by the President, and ten candidates from New York State. The percentage of failures is about the average. The following is the full class with grades for the four years course in June.

Arkansas: William Neely and Charles F. Martin; Connecticut: Robert F. Jackson, George J. Kernehan, John D. Davis, William H. Lacey, George H. Baird, and Archibald H. Sander; California: William H. Lacey, George H. Baird, and Archibald H. Sander; Colorado: William H. Lacey, George H. Baird, and Archibald H. Sander; Delaware: William H. Lacey, George H. Baird, and Archibald H. Sander; Florida: William H. Lacey, George H. Baird, and Archibald H. Sander; Georgia: William H. Lacey, George H. Baird, and Archibald H. Sander; Idaho: William H. Lacey, George H. Baird, and Archibald H. Sander; Illinois: William H. Lacey, George H. Baird, and Archibald H. Sander; Indiana: William H. Lacey, George H. Baird, and Archibald H. Sander; Iowa: William H. ## THE CENSURE OF BAYARD.

Both He and the President May Ignore the Action of the House. WASHINGTON, March 21.—Secretary Olney and State Department officials decline to converse as to the probable outcome of the passage of the resolutions censuring Ambassador Bayard except to say that Mr. Bayard will not be officially informed by the department of the resolutions were adopted. In regard to Mr. Bayard's reported tender of his resignation, conditioned on the adoption of the resolution of censure, it is said that Mr. Bayard intended taking the action indicated, but that he never carried out the idea by making his resignation in the hands of the President. The high respect and great personal friendship which Mr. Cleveland entertains for his Ambassador to the court of St. James will stand as a bar, it is said, to the censure of a Democratic vote.

WE SELL MUCH TO AFRICA.

AND ENGLAND IS SAID TO BE FRETTING ABOUT IT.

An Outcry Against the Alleged Americanization of the Road by Mining Magnates Who Order Machinery from Here, Where They Can Get the Best—How We Do It. Intelligence of South Africa received here yesterday dwelt upon a fresh outbreak of opposition in London to the alleged Americanization of the road by mining magnates. It is called by the wealthy mine owners, who, it is said, have been placing orders for machinery in the United States instead of in England. It was said further in the news despatches that directors of the English machinery companies were also directors in the American companies.

The news draws attention to the very intimate relations that have existed for the last half dozen years between the United States and the African continent in a business way, relations which came into being naturally, but were unobserved by the mercantile communities of the world generally. It was found that the Yankees had a practical monopoly of important branches of trade in the rich and growing countries down there.

Until about the year 1890, it is said, not much business was done by American manufacturers or other makers of mining machinery with South Africa. Then, however, mining on a large scale was begun, and a plan, as it has been called, began. Instead of small work or placer mining, wealthy men and syndicates put sufficient capital to open and equip a mine and work it on the principles of a big business enterprise from the start.

While mining in all localities began with surface work, later in America the deep shafts were sunk, and of almost all kinds, for years, that conditions had changed until the big mine owners, when they decided to open a mine, immediately capitalized the company so that it could begin business with all facilities and without delay.

When mining took a spurt in Africa, about six years ago, the men interested determined to work in the way which had been in vogue in this country with so notable success. The English capital, which in many cases was the strength of the enterprise, employed American skill and experience. Most of the engineers in the new country were and are Americans or British, who, as agents or foremen, had got their mining experience in this country, and consequently were Americanized in habit.

These men were familiar with American machinery, and naturally, in ordering, ordered what they knew about. American mining machinery and apparatus were and are, moreover, at the head of the list. In no other country has the machinery and engineering industries for development during twenty-five years that had been offered in the United States and South Africa.

Elsewhere, for instance, for a particular mine, perhaps, a drill or some mechanism had to be ordered from the States, and the machinery was sent by sea. In America, on the other hand, it would not answer satisfactorily. In America were almost all the machinery and engineering industries for development during twenty-five years that had been offered in the United States and South Africa.

The rock drill is an American invention, and it was most necessary to Africa, where most of the mining was done on a large scale. So American manufacturers received the orders for the mining machinery, and great quantities of it were shipped to Africa via London, that is to say, by way of England, for there were no ships sailing direct to Africa at that time.

Three years, however, the business from Africa has increased so that now one steamer goes to Africa, and the business is so large that it is no longer necessary to ship via London, that is to say, by way of England, for there were no ships sailing direct to Africa at that time.

Although pipe is a common product of this country, and England makes good pipe, for the most part, the American-made pipe has been the accepted standard. One reason for this is that the American-made pipe is much stronger than the English-made pipe.

Evasions of the Public Letting Law to Be Laid Before the Grand Jury. The Controller issued a statement yesterday in respect to the levy made on pictures in the City Hall by Goldfogle & Cohen, attorneys for Max Ganssow, that he would secure a bill of $1,195 for painting done for the Dock Commissioners. The trouble arose out of the Controller's refusal to pay the bill on the ground that it was incurred by the Dock Commissioners in direct evasion of the Consolidation act, which provides that all work amounting to over $1,000 must be let to the highest bidder. This bill was incurred by the Dock Commissioners by dividing the work up into three separate jobs. There seems to be trouble about several reformers, for several cases are to be laid before the Grand Jury.

It was intentional on the part of the Controller to allow Goldfogle & Cohen, the attorneys for Max Ganssow, to make a levy upon the property and threaten to sell the same before payment was made to them on their claim. The case could not be taken to the Grand Jury, in several of the departments where attempts were made to evade the law by dividing the work up into three separate jobs. There seems to be trouble about several reformers, for several cases are to be laid before the Grand Jury.
